Commissioner Copps:

Please do something to make the television programs suitable for children to watch. As school teachers for nearly 30 years, we have seen the results of the violence television has done to our country. We don't feel there should be R rated shows on before 10:00 p.m. as children today have bedtimes past 9:00 p.m. We're, also, appalled at the television commercials that aren't appropriate for children. Between the violence, the trashy commercials, and the vocabulary used on television shows that's not allowed at school, what good is there in allowing a child to watch television?

Sincerely,

David & Sharon O'Donnell

There is too much violence on television and people whatever age, especially younger ages, imitate what they see regardless of what anyone says. A lot of times, characters who are violent (even the good guys) are portrayed as being "cool" and people, especially the younger ages want to be cool.

My remarks may not sound highly intellectual, but my remarks are the "bottom line" regarding the violence on television, movies, etc.

Whoever allows such graphic material on television, movies, etc. are in a sense contributing to the serious effects it does have on our society.

Thank you.

Stephanie

I would like to add my voice to the people who are crying out against violent television shows. I KNOW they affect our children, and I don't like that effect, either. Please consider airing shows that are wholesome and a build-up for people, rather than a tear down. Both for physical and mental stability.

Thank you.

(I am a retired elementary teacher and in the years that I taught I noticed an increase in behavior problems as the children were exposed to violent shows on TV. Some parents never limit their children's TV and it certainly showed in their attitudes toward other people. Parents who were restrictive of TV had children much better behaved and willing to learn. I don't know why it is taking our nation so long to wake up. My prayer is that we will take action before we lose our nation.
